A Note Before You Begin

What you hold is not a horoscope. It is older than that, and warmer.

The Vietnamese zodiac — called Mười Hai Con Giáp, 'the twelve animals' — is a folk cosmology that has shaped how Vietnamese families think about character, partnership, and timing for more than two thousand years. It shares roots with the Chinese system, but it diverges in one quiet, telling way: where the Chinese fourth sign is the Rabbit, the Vietnamese fourth sign is the Cat.

That single difference says something important. Vietnamese astrology was never simply borrowed. It was lived in. Adapted. Made local. The animals are not abstractions; they are creatures the Vietnamese knew from their fields and forests and households.

At Fortress of Love, we treat all astrology as a language — one of several languages for talking about the soul. Western astrology speaks of seasons of birth. Numerology speaks of the math of your name. The Vietnamese zodiac speaks of inheritance: what kind of creature you arrived as.

This preview gives you a taste of what's inside the full ebook. We hope it makes you curious — about yourself, about the people you love, and about the old wisdom that has watched over Vietnamese families for two thousand years.

Dragon · Thìn

In Vietnam, the Dragon is not a monster — it is a blessing. The legend of Lạc Long Quân, the Dragon Lord, places the Dragon at the very founding of the Vietnamese people. To be born in the year of the Dragon is to inherit a piece of that mythology: vision, charisma, and the conviction that ordinary lives are not your destiny. Dragons do not blend in. Dragons were not made for blending.

CHARACTER

Dragons are visionary, magnetic, and naturally ambitious. They think in decades, not days. They are drawn to greatness — in their work, in their relationships, in their inner life — and they often pull others up with them. They are generous when secure, demanding when challenged, and almost always the most interesting person in the room. Dragons rarely doubt themselves; when they do, it shakes them deeply.

SHADOW

The Dragon's confidence can curdle into arrogance, and their vision can become impatience with anyone who can't see what they see. They sometimes mistake intensity for connection. Their growth lies in learning that humility is not the opposite of greatness — it is the soil greatness grows in.

IN LOVE

Dragons love powerfully and seek partners worthy of the partnership. They need someone who admires them without flattering them, challenges them without diminishing them. The Rat understands them, the Monkey matches their cleverness, and the Rooster keeps pace with their pride. The Dog distrusts their grandeur; the Ox is unimpressed by their fire.

WESTERN BRIDGE

The Dragon is the closest Vietnamese echo of Leo — the same regal magnetism, the same belief in destiny, the same need to be at the center of something meaningful. With a touch of Aries's pioneering fire and Sagittarius's vision, the Dragon is born to lead.
